Session 01

Topic: School Desegregation in Virginia in the Context of U.S. History

Description: Dr. Peter Wallenstein will present an overview of the history of school desegregation in Virginia within the stream of U.S history, from the Civil War to the Civil Rights Movement. He will also discuss the significance of Brown and its implementation process on the current policy and practice in U.S. public schools.

Faculty: Dr. Peter Wallenstein

Time: 3:00-4:30 p.m.

Location: VCU, Academic Learning Commons Building

Readings: Wallenstein, Cradle of America, chapters 23 & 24

Session 02

Topic: Brown, the Civil Rights Movement, and the Use of the Past

Description: Dr. Gabriel Reich will discuss how the dominant narrative of the Civil Rights Movement, starting from Brown in 1954 and ending with the Civil Rights Act of 1964, has been shaped by ideology and political contestation, and how that narrative is circulated in textbooks, museums, public rituals, and various artifacts of mass media.
Monday’s Essential Questions

Why did African Americans in Virginia seek the end of segregated education? How did school desegregation in Virginia impact African American education and educators?

Monday Morning 8 a.m., Charter bus departs from the front of the Honors College dorm

Session 03

Topic: Improving African American Education Before Brown
Description: In this session, Dr. Lauranett L. Lee will discuss how African American communities made efforts to improve African American education prior to the Brown decision, in particular by training and producing quality African American teachers. She will also outline the unintended consequences of school desegregation, including the demotion or dismissal of African American educators in the 1950s and 1960s because of the integration of African American and white schools.

Faculty: Dr. Lauranett L. Lee
Time: 9:00-10:30 a.m.
Location: Virginia State University (VSU)
Readings: Wilkerson, Negro School Movement in Virginia
Randolph & Sanders, “In Search of Excellence in Education: The Political, Academic, and Curricular Leadership of Ethel T. Overby”

Session 04

Topic: Tour of VSU Campus (Teacher Preparation Program)
Description: NEH scholars will learn how African American teacher training was done in the 1940s by visiting historic buildings at Virginia State University.

Faculty: Dr. Lauranett L. Lee
Time: 10:30 a.m.-12:00 p.m.
Location: Charter bus / VSU campus
Monday Afternoon

Session 05

Topic: Archival Work

Description: NEH scholars will spend time with Mr. Lucious Edwards, Jr., Archivist Emeritus of Special Collections and Archives at VSU. Mr. Edwards will share the manuscript collections of the Virginia Teachers Association Papers and the Prince Edward County Free Schools. He will also give an overview to the NEH scholars about how to use archives to find primary sources for teaching.

Faculty: Mr. Lucious Edwards, Jr.

Time: 1:00-2:30 p.m.

Location: Special Collections and Archives Building, and then Engineering Building, Virginia State University (VSU)

---

Session 06

Topic: Curriculum Project

Description: NEH scholars will be introduced to their curriculum project by the program master teachers. In small groups, NEH scholars will brainstorm ideas for their curriculum projects. NEH scholars will be encouraged to work with other teachers to create their lessons for the project. At the end of this session, NEH scholars will share the essential question/focus of their curriculum project lessons.

Faculty: Dr. Yonghee Suh & Master Teachers

Time: 4:00-5:30 p.m.

Location: VCU, Academic Learning Commons Building

---

Tuesday’s Essential Questions

How did school desegregation play out at the local level? How does the story of Prince Edward County fit into the story of school desegregation in Virginia?

Tuesday Morning

Session 07

Topic: 1951 Student Strike and Davis v. Prince Edward School Board

Description: NEH scholars will learn about the 1951 student strike and the Davis v. Prince Edward County School Board lawsuit that became one of the five cases involved in Brown v. Board of Education. Dr. Larissa Smith Fergusson will present the history of R. R. Moton High School (now a museum) and the significance of the 1951 student strike in the broader context of the Civil Rights Movement.

Faculty: Dr. Larissa Smith Fergusson

Time: 9:00-10:30 a.m.

Location: R. R. Moton Museum, Farmville, VA

Readings: Kluger, Simple Justice, chapters 19 & 20

Session 08

Topic: Tour of R. R. Moton Museum

Description: NEH scholars will have a guided tour of the R. R. Moton Museum to learn about the 1951 student strike and the Davis v. Prince Edward County School Board lawsuit. Scholars will tour six galleries that feature the 1951 student strike, life under the “separate but equal” policy, the Davis case, Massive Resistance, the closed school era, and the reopening of the public schools in 1964.

Faculty: Dr. Larissa Smith Fergusson

Time: 10:30 a.m.-12:00 p.m.

Location: R. R. Moton Museum, Farmville, VA

Tuesday Afternoon

Session 09

Topic: Tour of Downtown Farmville and Longwood University

Description: NEH scholars will visit historic sites such as the First Baptist Church and the Methodist church where African American educators and leaders gathered for their meetings, as well as selected locations in Longwood University.

Faculty: Dr. Larissa Smith Fergusson

Time: 1:00-2:30 p.m.

Location: Charter bus / Longwood University, The First Baptist Church, Downtown Farmville, VA

Session 10
Topic: Primary Sources at the Library of Virginia
Description: NEH scholars will work with Catherine Fitzgerald Wyatt, Librarian for the Library of Virginia, who will discuss how to locate appropriate primary sources and use them to create and teach lessons on school desegregation. Focusing on primary sources from the Virginia Memory digital database of the Library of Virginia, this session will also cover the division in Virginia’s society over the issue of school desegregation and how Virginians responded in different ways to Brown.

Faculty: Ms. Catherine Fitzgerald Wyatt
Time: 4:00-5:30 p.m.
Location: The Library of Virginia

Wednesday’s Essential Questions

How did the process of school desegregation proceed in the South? How did the status of school desegregation change in the early 1960s?

Wednesday Morning

Session 11

Topic: Creating Massive Resistance Laws
Description: NEH scholars will learn about the state of Virginia’s response to Brown v. Board of Education, focusing on the adoption of Massive Resistance laws in 1956 and their revision over time, as well as the impact of Massive Resistance on the Civil Rights Movement and racial relations in Virginia and the South.

Faculty: Dr. Brian Daugherity
Time: 9:00-10:30 a.m.
Location: VCU, 701 West Grace Building
Readings: Daugherity, Keep on Keeping On, chapter 3
Klarman, The Backlash Thesis

Session 12

Topic: Tour of the Capitol Building and Virginia Civil Rights Memorial
Description: This will be a walking tour of downtown Richmond. More specifically, NEH scholars will visit the Capitol Building where Massive Resistance legislation was adopted, as well as the Virginia Civil Rights Memorial, which includes a statue of R. R. Moton High School student Barbara Johns, who organized and led the 1951 student strike. We will also visit the statue of Governor (and later U.S. Senator) Harry F. Byrd, Sr., the architect of Massive Resistance, as well as other historic sites, time permitting.
Wednesday Afternoon
Session 13

Topic: Archival Work
Description: NEH scholars will visit the Special Collections and Archives of Virginia Commonwealth University and explore primary sources, including the Voices of Freedom collection as well as documents by Edward H. Peeples, Helen Baker, Heslip M. Lee, and others who participated in or were witness to efforts to desegregate the schools in Richmond and surrounding areas. Dr. Wesley Chenault, head of VCU Special Collections, will lead a discussion on how to find various types of primary sources, such as personal papers or visual and audio sources, at archives, libraries, and museums.

Faculty: Dr. Wesley Chenault & Ray Bonis
Time: 1:00-2:30 p.m.
Location: VCU, Academic Learning Commons Building

Session 14

Topic: Oral History and Teachers in the Movement
Description: Dr. Alridge will discuss how African American teachers taught, in both segregated and desegregated schools, as well as how those same teachers participated in social activism during the Civil Rights era of the 1960s. He will also share his perspective on oral history as a method of preserving and telling stories about the past, specifically the history of school desegregation in Virginia and the Civil Rights Movement.

Faculty: Dr. Derrick Alridge
Time: 2:45-4:15 p.m.
Location: VCU, Academic Learning Commons Building
Reading: Chafe, “The Gods Brings Threads to Webs Begun”

Thursday’s Essential Questions

How did the status of school desegregation in the South change in the late 1960s, and why?
What were the pros and cons of school integration for African Americans in the South and elsewhere?

Thursday Morning
8 a.m., Charter bus departs from the front of the Honors College dorm
Session 15

Topic: Neither White Nor Black Schools: Just Schools (Green v. County School Board of New Kent, 1968)
Description: Dr. Jody Allen will provide a lecture that sets the context for school desegregation in Virginia and will specifically talk about Green v. New Kent County, a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court decision that ended “freedom of choice” school desegregation plans and accelerated school desegregation in Virginia and throughout the nation.
Faculty: Dr. Jody Allen
Time: 9:00-10:30 a.m.
Location: New Kent County High School (7365 Egypt Road, New Kent, VA 23124)
Readings: Allen and Daugherity, Recovering a Lost Story
Allen, Daugherity, and Trebanis, New Kent County Lesson Plan

Session 16

Topic: Tour of George W. Watkins School and New Kent School
Description: NEH scholars will tour two historic schools in New Kent County: the George W. Watkins School, the all-black school at the time, and the New Kent School, the all-white school at the time. Scholars will learn about inequities in educational opportunities for African American and white students in Virginia in the mid-twentieth century as well as the process of school desegregation in New Kent County.
Faculty: Drs. Jody Allen & Brian Daugherity
Time: 10:30 a.m.-12 p.m.
Location: Charter bus / New Kent County sites

Thursday Afternoon

Session 17

Topic: Memories of Brown and Green
Description: NEH scholars will meet with former students from both the George W. Watkins and New Kent Schools. The former students will share their experiences going to school in the county in the 1950s and 1960s. NEH scholars will also have an opportunity to ask questions and engage in discussion with the students on what race relations and educational opportunities were like in New Kent County at the time of the Green lawsuit and afterward.
Faculty: Drs. Jody Allen & Brian Daugherity
Session 18

Topic: Curriculum Project
Description: NEH scholars will complete their curriculum projects and have them ready for presentation on Friday. Master teachers will assist them. After this session, scholars will have time to work on their lesson plans individually or in small groups.

Faculty: Drs. Yonghee Suh & Brian Daugherity

Time: 1:00-2:30 p.m.
Location: Watkins Elementary School (11705 New Kent Highway, New Kent, VA, 23124), auditorium

Friday’s Essential Questions

How did political and judicial changes affect the process of school desegregation in the 1970s and thereafter? What are some of the successes and challenges of school integration in the present day?

Friday Morning Session 19

Topic: 60 Years Since Brown
Description: Dr. Charles Ford, co-author of the book, Elusive Equality: Desegregation and Resegregation in Norfolk’s Public Schools (2012), will talk about the triumphs and tragedies of Brown v. Board of Education and school desegregation in Virginia. Based on his research, Dr. Ford will reflect on the legacies of Brown v. Board of Education and discuss why public school desegregation was such a contested affair that was abandoned after a brief moment of success.

Faculty: Dr. Charles Ford
Time: 9:00-10:30 a.m.
Location: VCU, Academic Learning Commons Building
Readings: Ford and Littlejohn, Elusive Equality, chapters 5 & 6

Friday Morning Session 20
Topic: Curriculum Project
Description: NEH scholars will present and exchange feedback on the lessons they created for their curriculum projects.
Faculty: Drs. Yonghee Suh & Brian Daugherity, and Master Teachers
Time: 10:30-12:00 p.m.
Location: VCU, Academic Learning Commons Building
